The Atlantic Charter

As you read consider how Roosevelt and Churchill sought to prevent future wars. The following words may be new to you: aggrandizement, hindrance, practicable. You may want to use a dictionary to look them up.

The President of the United States of America and the Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, representing His Majesty’s Government in the United Kingdom, being met together, deem it right to make known certain common principles in the national policies of their respective countries on which they base their hopes for a better future for the world.

First, their countries seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other;
Second, they desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned;
Third, they respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live; and they wish to see sovereign rights and self government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them;
Fourth, they will endeavor, with due respect for their existing obligations, to further the enjoyment by all States, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world which are needed for their economic prosperity;
Fifth, they desire to bring about the fullest collaboration between all nations in the economic field with the object of securing, for all, improved labor standards, economic advancement and social security;
Sixth, after the final destruction of Nazi tyranny, they hope to see established a peace which will afford to all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries, and which will afford assurance that all the men in all the lands may live out their lives in freedom from fear and want;
Seventh, such a peace should enable all men to traverse the high seas and oceans without hindrance;
Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons must come to the abandonment of the use of force.

ABOUT THE SOURCE
Soon after World War II began, Germany defeated Poland, France, and several other European nations. Great Britain stood alone against the powerful Nazi war machine. Alarmed by the possibility of a German conquest of all of Europe, the U.S. government started sending aid to Britain. During the summer of 1941, U.S. President Franklin Roosevelt met with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill off the coast of Canada. On August 14, 1941, they issued a joint declaration known as the Atlantic Charter.
World War II

Primary Source

Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential. They will likewise aid and encourage all other practicable measures which will lighten for peace-loving peoples the crushing burden of armaments.

Franklin D. Roosevelt
Winston S. Churchill

Source: Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt, vol. 10 (1938–1950), Samuel Rosenman, editor

WHAT DID YOU LEARN?

1. Recall Aside from their own governments, Roosevelt and Churchill identify which government in their statement? For what purpose do they identify this government?

   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________

2. Summarize What are Roosevelt and Churchill’s goals regarding territory?

   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________

3. Make Judgments Roosevelt and Churchill make several assumptions in their statement. What are two important assumptions included in the Atlantic Charter?

   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________
   ______________________________________________________________________